when in need of a canopy for wel-dings, seeds functions, etc., remember Mr. Makett can furnish one at short notice, any length desired. The can-opy used at the charity ball was fur-nished by Mr. Mallett.—ndv.

OWLS' BALL.

The hig event of the season is the owls' ball to be held in the armory Priday, Feb. 18th. The committee has made arrangements with the consolidated company to run free cars to New London, Jewett City and Yantic, thereby giving the people in those places a fine opportunity to take in one of the best social events of the season. Don't forget, Friday night, Feb, 18th, at the armory.

BREED THEATER. On the Firing Lines of Tripoli, Today's Feature Picture.

In the first scenes of this superb military feature picture at the Breed loday the opening of the war between Tripoll and Italy is seen, and Lieutenant Troyano, a young Italian officer, makes haste to the home of his little sweetheart, Marie Petrini, and hids her a fond farewell.

The days are long and dreary in the homes of those left behind, and the daily papers are sagerly scanned for news from the front. There are vivid accounts of the raging battles and anaccounts of the riging battles and announcements of the urgent need for Red Cross nurses. Marie reads this appeal and resolves to go at once to Tripoli as a messenger of mercy. She leaves her luxurious home and securing an appointment takes up her duties. She makes an adorable nurse and wins the hearts of all who come under her care, but one day while the Italian army was passing through the Italian army was passing through the streets the enemy fires upon them and a terrible conflict ensues. A treacher-ous shot from a Turkish rifle pierces her heart and one of the most loved in her class answers the call of martyr

The saddest blow falls upon Lieutenant Trosumo, who, not knowing of her presence there, comes upon her body among the other dead. The commanding general, realizing the great wrong done by shooting down the women of the Red Cross, immediately orders the fleutenant to bring into play his aeroplane and destroy the city blich has just witnessed such an awful outrage. Accordingly he soars ful outrage. Accordingly he soars above, dropping bomb after bomb into the city, all with telling effect. In his alliticty to grapple personally with those who deprived him of his loved ne, he sours at a lower slittude unt the reaches within their gunshot. This taunting flight is too much for the enemy and they open fire upon him timelly crippling him and his machine, and he suffers a terrible fall outside of the city, however, and he is saved by his own countrymen.

The foll is a serious one, and he

The fall is a serious one and he finally answers the call of death and is carried to the side of his beloved Marie, and the two are buried with rollitary honors, younded in death under the overspreading wings of love and neare.

TODAY AT THE AUDITORIUM.

There is a well balanced vandeville bill at the Auditorium for the first three days of this wock, consisting of three acts, each of an entirely different pature, and a well selected programme of photoplays. There have not been many animal acts seen in Norwich this geason, therefore the management of fals house have booked Rand's Musi-cal Comedy Dogs to head today's bill. cal Comedy Dogs to head today's bill. This troupe of canine comedians represent the aome of animal intelligence. The dogs are all thoroughbreds and some of them are prize winners. Some of the feats performed by the dogs are positively starfling and show what careful training can accomplish in this line. An animal act that is decidedly out of the ordinary. out of the ordinary.

The photoplay programme has been curefully selected and the subjects are of the kind that will please. Anothing that might possibly oftend the most fractions has been eliminated and one may safely bring the children to any performance, as the pictures are selected as as to always show something instructive. The achievits for Monday and Tuesday are The Worth of a Man, an Imp drama that is unusual. A boarding House Mystery, a comedy by the Rex company that has a most unique plot and one that is full of laughs; The Tom Boy, a comedy drama by the famous Thanhouser company, that has that peculiar Thanhouser twist that has made this firm's films so populiar. so populist.

Lecal Tales at James Clancy's Poli Theater.

A picture programme that is said to be one of the best that has been at James Chancy's Poli theator will be on for two days commencing with coday's mutinee and for tomorrow. In ablition to the pictures a local acture been specially engaged for the lest three days and none other than falcolm and Kristek, who were born and rulsed in this city, and whose eets as hand balancers is well known o minny. Whonce came this man? As if on the wings
Of the winds of God that blew.
He moved, undaunted, mid captains and kings.
And, not having learned, be knew.
Was he son of the soil? or child of the sky?
Or, prays was he both? Ah me!
How little they dreamed, as the storm rolled nigh.
What he was, and was to be!

When trembled the lamps of hope, or when trembled the lamps of hope, or quite Blow out in that furious gale,

He drew his light from the larger
Light
Above him that did not fail,
Heaven-led, all triais and perils among
As unto some splendid goal
He fared right onward, unflinching—this strong,
God-gifted, heroic soul!

We know him now-how noble his

We know him now—how noble his part,
And how clear was his vision then!
With the firmest hand and the kindliest heart
Of them all—this master of men.
Of the prids of power or the lust of pell,
O, never a taint we find:
He lost himself in the larger self
Of his country and all mankind.

There are these called great or good by right; But, as long as the long roll is, Not many the names with the doubts light light
Of greatness and goodness like his.
Thrice happy the nation that holds him

As the perilous years go by.

For after the trumpets have ceased to blow,
And the banners are folded away,
And the stress and the splender forgotten, we know.
Of a truth, in that judgment-day,
That, whatsoeer else in the stream
that rells
May sink and be utterly gone,
The souls of the men who were true
to their souls.
Forever go marching on.

In spite of continued unfavorable conditions, the production of crude oil in Russia during 1915 increased 1,356,224 barrels over the preceding year. This was due to the increased production of the Grosne, Surakhany and other new fields. The Beku distract, which contributed the greater part of the product remained almost stationery.

While it is probable that many of the roborts of extraordinarity rich ora deposits and unusually fine coal deposits that have long seen a common feature of discussion in China's natural resources and latent commercial and industrial possibilies were greatly and industrial possibilies were greatly exaggerated, enough is known of some of the deposits to warrant the state-ment that China is well provided with fuel and ore for iron and steel de-yelopment indefinitely in the future.
